The opportunity to grow. To create. To direct your energy.
At Stanford, you’ll find a world of INFINITE POSSIBILITY.

Three undergraduate schools

More than 70 areas of study

4:1 student-faculty ratio

11 Stanford-operated campuses overseas

More than $5 million annually for undergraduate research

81 student residences, with more than 95% of students living in guaranteed campus housing

More than 650 student groups

Generous financial aid

$65,000 or less annual income = full tuition, room and meal plan costs covered;
$125,000 or less annual income = full tuition covered

78% of students graduate without educational debt
Leaders in their fields, Stanford’s 2,153 faculty members pursue groundbreaking research supported by a budget of $1.22 billion. Since the University’s founding, 31 faculty members have been awarded the Nobel Prize.
An 8,180-acre campus adjoining Palo Alto, California—35 miles south of San Francisco

A thriving campus arts district with museums, 842-seat concert hall, and state-of-the-art teaching and studio space

Top-ranked humanities departments, with Pulitzer Prize and MacArthur Award-winning faculty

Nine departments, dozens of laboratories and more than 250 faculty members in the School of Engineering

Faculty-led field-based education, summer research opportunities and interdisciplinary majors in the School of Earth, Energy & Environmental Sciences

132 national championships and 22 Directors’ Cups won by Stanford’s NCAA Division I athletics program

Stanford’s student body of 6,994 undergraduates—approximately half of whom identify as students of color—is among the most diverse in the United States.
Students choose their major program from within three undergraduate schools.

Applicants do not need to meet any minimum grade point average or test score to secure admission. Please note that not all schools calculate grade point averages on a 4.0 scale, and only about one-third of our admitted students attend a school that provides class rank. Many other variables such as academic program rigor, teacher evaluations, extracurricular activities and accomplishments, special talents and affiliations, outside commitments and writing samples also influence our admission decisions.
